

Miniature Golf Course Gains Town Approval

North Dansville Town Zoning Enforcement Officer Richard J. Applin issued one building permit in the month of January, according to his monthly report to the Town Board last week.

Applin said the permit was issued to Mark Miller and Julia Entlerline for construction of a miniature golf course and parking area on Ossian Street at Frontage Road.

Also submitted to the board was Applin's annual report of activities for Feb. 2, 1987 through Feb. 1 of this year.

He said during the period he issued 30 permits, an increase of three over that of 1986-87. Applin said he declined five applications forwarding them on to the Zoning Board of Appeals for action by that group.

The zoning officer repeated his recommendation to the Town Board that it consider raising fees for permits to be in line with the fees charged by the village and to establish a charge for both certificates of compliance and certificates of occupancy.

Senator Cook pointed out that travel safety is significantly inferior in rural areas, with this reflected, in part, through "an accidental death rate in rural counties 39 percent higher than either downstate or upstate metropolitan counties."

Having conducted numerous symposia and public hearings throughout the state on rural development over the past five years, the Commission, whose vice-chairman is Assemblyman William L. Parment, had developed three legislative proposals. These are intended to best stretch the limited financial and technical assistance available to address rural roads and transport problems:

Creation of the Local Road Classification Task Force. This body, comprised of local highway officials, DOT and Department of Agriculture and Markets representatives, local businesses and College of Agriculture and Life Sciences researchers from Cornell, is developing alternative classifications and guidelines for low-volume local roads. According to Senator Cook, a particular concern for this group is to make more feasible engineering standards for local roads. Often, high standards suitable to heavy traffic volume roads are enforced for rural road construction, resulting in the phenomena of a few miles of excellent road built or repaired, while others must be left out entirely due to insufficient funding available to do the job to standard.

On the agenda for 1988 is the establishment of a Priority Local Roads Program in DOT which would promote a cost-effective approach to the use of construction and maintenance funds. The program would enable state and local officials to identify and put priorities on local roads in accordance with criteria developed by the Task Force.

Another bill in the offing would establish a State Local Roads Research Board, to be administered by the new office of Rural Affairs. This body would develop innovative procedures for rural roads and bridges building and maintenance programs. It would also promote joint equipment purchasing practices of localities and technology transfer projects.

Despite recent increases in state aid, Senator Cook pointed out, total state aid for local highways in constant dollars is down from a high of $171 million in 1967 to an estimated $78 million in 1984-85. Investment in road networks actually decreased 52 percent over the period from 1964-84.

The Commission emphasizes a systemic approach to assess and address the needs of the state and rural transportation infrastructure. "The point is, we cannot ask policymakers and the public to simply throw more money at the needs and problems associated with our state and local road network—an important consideration... is the need to devise planning and management tools that will assist the state and municipalities in making their individual transportation resource allocation decisions. Future road and bridge improvement needs at all levels in the system very likely will exceed the dollars available to meet them," the Senator concluded.

I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick...
— Ezekiel 34:16

So many young people seem to lose themselves in the confusions of today's world. Time was when a youngster pretty well knew what the future held for him. Today, with so many choices to make, young people don't always have the guidance they need to make the right ones. Fortunately, the Bible tells us that God will bring back those who have strayed, that He will bind up their wounds and make them whole again. We invite you to attend church this Sunday, and learn more about this God who won't give up on you.
